Posting your pictures online for friends and family to enjoy is easy on photo sharing websites, and with many to choose from, you can choose a site that meets your needs. We've visited some of the best, more of a web hosting service than a typical photo-sharing site, Mac.com makes it easy for Apple users to build a personal website using homePage software online, then send photos and videos to the site with the iPhoto Mac tool. A free 60-day trial membership gives you 20MB of online storage. The $100 membership paid per year provides 100MB, as well as other technical support features. This site is strangely named to allow you to create public and private photo albums and save as many images as you like; You can also order 4 in 6 prints for just 19 cents each. But the real emphasis is on the community -- you can get information about yourself and your favorite links, count the number of visitors to your album, and let viewers leave their comments. Fotki offers a free 14-day trial; Membership costs $30 a year. Organize your images (with free software available to download), create photo albums, and build web pages on this site. FotoTime offers a 30-day free trial membership and annual membership at $23.95 for 250 MB of storage. Join you discounts on products ranging from printing (49 cents for 4-by-6, 39 cents for subscribers) to coaster sets ($19.99; $14.99 for subscribers). If you don't have to subscribe but want to send your photos to size Long to say, print order, you can They are free for 30 days before they are automatically cleared. Upload photos, organize albums, and share them with friends on this slick designed site. You can also send ePostcards, order prints and greeting cards, and print high quality at home. Membership is free and allots you have 100 MB storage. The selling point of this site is that it's incredibly easy to post those photos of your own. ImageEvent has two types of online software called Easy Upload (which is fast and simple) and Mega Upload, which allows you to send multiple photos at once. You can also email your images to the site or even electronically in a CD-ROM. In addition, ImageEvent will host images of items they sell on eBay and other auction sites. For $24.95 per year or $2.95 per month, you have permanent storage of up to 1500 images and a 10% discount when you order a print. Printing 4 at 6 is 49 cents on Olot, but storage is unlimited and membership is free, and you can feel safe about the quality of the print you order -- the site is run by Kodak. You can edit, product, or enhance your images with borders and special effects, and best of all, you don't even need a digital camera! Only electronically in a roll of videos; Olot will put your photos online and give you electronically negative. With its asses of borders, frames, backgrounds, and album covers, Picturetrail allows you to create a virtual scrap book that looks just like the real thing. (Well, almost.) A slideshow option will automatically navigate through your images, and you can add transition effects (e.g., fade-outs) and music for the full multimedia experience. Membership is free and prints are 4 by 6 29 cents. Best looked and probably the best known of independent photo-sharing sites, Shutterfly offers all the basics -- unlimited free online storage, editing tools, printing (49 cents for 4-by-6) -- but its fascinating, easy-to-navigate design makes it a standout. Another plus: Pulitzer Prize-winning photographer Bill Foley gives his tips on capturing memorable pictures of kids, pets, travel spots, and more. Membership is free of charge. If you want the benefits of saving digital photography money without a digital camera, this site will develop your 35mm movie for just $4.98 rolls (including $1.99 shipping) – much cheaper than your local drug store. You also have unlimited free storage (Snapfish put your prints online or you can upload them from a digital camera), and your friends and family can order individual prints starting at 25 cents for 4-by-6. The busy design of this site will be familiar to regular Yahoo users. You can create simple albums or themes (e.g., pets, travel, or baby) at one stage, and adding your own images is a breeze. But the best feature of this site is that it marshals yahoo's seemingly limitless content and community resources -- you can come to a group to connect with other enthusiasts and make expert recommendations on everything from camera purchases to scanning a print Membership free gets you 30 MB of storage space copyright © 2002 2002
